Relaxation, Reinvented

When sweatpants are too casual but you want to take the ease of athletic gear with you, go for cropped, breathable hybrid pants from designers like Mark McNairy and Michael Bastian. The jumbo print and lightweight cotton means you can pair them with nicer shoes—like these suede moccasins—without sacrificing comfort.

Jacques Campos sweater, $180; Mark McNairy New Amsterdam pants, $295; r.Crew belt, $55; Burberry Prorsum shoes, $495; Coach Jacket, $398

en incorrectly associate comfort with items that start in the XXX. Just because you've gone casual doesn't mean fit should suffer," says Nicole Benoist, stylist and founder of retail co-op collective MX. Look for fabrics that have a bit of stretch woven into them, such as cotton jersey nylon. Designers like H&M and Michael Bastian use these fabrics to create sweats and jeans with a more tailored look. The tapered cuts will keep you looking fit—and not like you're shufflin' to a freshman orientation. —Dan Michel

Vanessa Marie tank top, $60; Club Monaco shirt, $60; T. Brass V-neck sweater, $120

LET THERE BE WHITE

You don't have to be Colonel Sanders to pull off a white suit. In fact, it's better if you're not. What you do have to be is brave. White is everything: it's high contrast, your complexion, your ability to not barbecue easily, and, most important, your sense of style. To put a white suit in its proper context, the answer and this one's going to be easy. But you never needed it to be.
